Dispatches from the World of Design

ED favorites Caitlin and Samuel Dowe-Sandes of Marrakech-based Popham Design are known for their exuberant tiles. For the first time, they are bringing their love of geometry and color to hand-knotted silk and wool rugs, like the Splinter, shown here in indigo and available in other shades upon request. 9' x 11', $4,700. pophamdesign.com

1 Somewhere between a credenza and a Narnia portal lies the DeKauri, a collaboration among designer Daniel Germani, Cosentino, and Riva1920. Crafted of kauri wood from New Zealand (and also available in walnut), it discreetly hides your bathroom sink and vanity from guests and evil queens alike. The faucet is by Fantini Rubinetti, and the lighting is by Juniper. 61" w. x 27" d. x 86" h., from $25,000. riva1920.it

2 Those who reveled in the significance of a mushroom omelet in Phantom Thread, this year's Oscar-nominated Paul Thomas Anderson film, will want to snap up Cabana's gold-trimmed, hand-painted glass plates (the salad dish is shown) and coasters, featuring renderings of different fungi. Eggs not included. Set of 12 salad plates, $2,800; other sizes are available. cabanagloballuxe.com

3 Both children and adults will happily get caught with their hands in Waterford's Reflections cookie jar, whose faceted crystal surface was inspired by the Irish countryside. It's available in a limited edition of 500. 9.5" dia. x 13.5" h., $2,500. waterford.com

4 If a Louise Bourgeois bronze arachnid sculpture is your fantasy art purchase, you'll likely gravitate toward Marc Ange's Les Araignées chair, which ED fell in love with at a special beach installation during last year's Art Basel Miami. Composed of a circular seat covered in Sunbrella fabric (shown here in Blue Canard) and suspended on multiple metal legs, it has the elegance of a spider with none of the bite. 33.5" h., $12,000. ljedition.com

ALL ANGLES

Not all furniture is intended to be statement-making: For every peacock, there needs to be a wallflower. Take the four-piece RH, Restoration Hardware Olema outdoor collection, a collaboration with the Dallas-based furniture brand Sutherland. "It's not going to call attention to itself," explains owner David Sutherland of the angular but quiet Olema pieces (the lounge chair is pictured above), made of teak and best upholstered in white or black for maximum subtle impact. rh.com
